WORKPLACE VIOLENCE TRAINING FOR SUPERVISORS AND JHSC MEMBERS

According to Statistics Canada, in 2004 over 356,000 violence-related incidents occurred in the workplace. While workplace violence is often thought to be a physical assault on a person, in actuality it can also include harassment, verbal abuse, threats and threatening behaviour.

Violence can happen in any workplace - but in fact some workplaces, such as those that handle money or work with the public, are more susceptible. The effects of workplace violence can also be enormous, and can have life-altering consequences. As a result, various legislative changes have been implemented to help reduce the risk of violence-related incidents in the workplace.

Training Solution – Online Workplace Violence Course

This course is designed to assist employers, managers, supervisors and Joint Health and Safety Committees understand the impact of workplace violence and to develop preventative strategies.
