RESPIRATORY PROTECTION PROGRAM

Exposure to airborne chemical or biological agents is an occupational hazard, and one that requires control measures. While it is always preferred that workplace hazards are eliminated or minimized, some instances may arise where workers must also rely on personal protective equipment such as a respirator to help ensure their health and safety. However, used improperly, serious illness or death can result.

Employers are required to have a written program in place for workers who use respiratory protection, and to provide information to those workers on the proper selection, use and care of respirators.

Training Solution – Online Respiratory Protection Program Course

This course is designed for those who are required to wear, or ensure the use of respiratory protection in the workplace. This may include workers, supervisors, Respiratory Protection Program Administrators, employers, etc.
