WORKPLACE ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS

There was a time when work-related injuries and even deaths were considered a "cost" of doing business. However today, workplace accidents and incidents are considered both socially and morally unacceptable.

According to the Association of Workers' Compensation Boards of Canada, workplace accidents have been on the decline since the late 1980s. However, while lost time accidents have decreased, the number of work-related deaths has increased to an average of 3 each day in Canada alone!

Training Solution – Online Workplace Accident Investigations Course

This course is designed to assist managers, supervisors, Joint Health and Safety Committee members and Health and Safety Representatives to conduct effective investigations in the event of a workplace accident or incident, in an effort to reduce the risk of repeat occurrences.

Workplace Accident Investigations will also assist employers and individuals to take appropriate steps to ensure that proper reporting obligations are met, in order to avoid any legal non-compliance.

Course Overview

Upon completing Workplace Accident Investigations, participants will learn about:

- Types of accidents and incidents
- Reporting obligations, both internal and external
- Investigation process, including:
  - securing the scene
  - collecting data through investigation techniques and interviews
- Written reports and recommendations
- Basic fundamentals of an Early and Safe Return to Work for injured or ill workers
